

Project Planning, Management Using PCM and RBM Tools

16-18 May 2024

3 Days Residential Workshop

Course Concept:

“Begin with the end in mind” and “Failing to plan is planning to fail” are two famous quotes from the great management scientist - Steven Covey, which is very apt for those involved in development interventions. NGOs are increasingly called upon to use results-based approaches to design, implement and manage programs and projects. Planning the result of a project right at the start and working towards achieving the same will certainly ensure that resources are put to optimum use and beneficiaries receive the benefits that are committed to them within the project. KKID, with its expertise in development projects is committed to this task of updating and capacity building NGOs with the latest tools and technics to manage development interventions.

Programme Content:

This comprehensive course will provide fast-track training in project management, looking into the various components of planning, implementing monitoring with result and impact orientation.

- Basics of project management – Assessing the Community Needs.
