

3-Day Residential Training on Community Psychology & Counseling Skills

27th -29th January 2025

Course Concept:

The role of a community psychologist is to create and evaluate an array of programs and policies that help people control the stressful aspects of community and organizational environments. They also must assess the needs of a community and teach its members how to recognize an incipient problem and deal with it before it becomes intractable. They also are expected to study and implement more humane and effective ways for formerly institutionalized populations to live productively in society's mainstream.

We will focus on the application of psychology to community programs for the prevention of mental disorders and the promotion of mental health. Participants will learn systematic counselling techniques, practical modules with experiential processes, and role competencies required for the social workers and counsellors.
